Preparations Being Made For a

Heavy Attendance.

Logan, Aug. 8.—Impressive funeral services were held at the city cometery yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the remains of little Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Crawford of this city, were consigned to their last resting place. Owing to the fact that her death was caused by scarlet fever, it was deemed best not to hold a meeting at any public hall. A long certege followed the remains to the grave and the speakers at the brief service were fiders issance Smith and Joseph Kimball, both of whom delivered cloquein addresses. A chorus, under the direction of Professor G. W. Thatcher, and Mrs. A. L. Farrell, and others, furnished beauting comprising W. S. Lamoreaux, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Farrell, and others, furnished beauting friends deposited many handsome bouqueis upon the grave.

Preparations are going forward at both our great colleges for a heavy thiter's work this season. At the agriral laxative like Dr. Pierce's Pleasant cultural college, a large force of men is at work on the new shops; the library is being moved into more commodious quarters: the splendid 160-page catalogue, which is profinsely illustrated, is being widely distributed; and many valuable experiments are being made in the horticulture, chemical and other departments. It is possible that the chair in entomology and veterinary science, left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Fisher, may not be filled this season.

An Ogden Invention.

The School Tax Levy.

At first sight the school tax levy for Ogden asked for by the board of education appears unusually high, being 6½ mills, against 4 mills for last year. However, the assessed valuation is less this year by about $2,500,000, and the actual revenue will be considerably less than last year. The board of education estimates that $79,000 will be required for the schools for 1897-8, and for this sum the 6½-mill levy is necessary. Besides, the increased expenditure arising from the fact that over 300 more children of school age are to be provided for, there is the additional expense of interest on the money which the board had to borrow because of the refund of the 2-mill tax. for Ogden asked for by the board of

The regulation cloth was navy blue and the embroidery was gold thread. There was a double row of brass buttons. With this coat was worn knee breeches, buckles, silk stockings, a white tie, a chapeau de bras with gold tassels, and a short sword. These items are all on record in documents in the state department. A section of a coat lapel which once belonged to one of our ministers to France has been preserved. There is an interesting little story associated with this particular uniform.

The minister to whom it belonged came to Washington on a leave of absence, fell in love with a pretty girl and was accepted by her. He had lived beyond his means, and, not having money enough to buy a wedding outfit, left his court uniform in pawn with. Mr. Loudon as security for a dress suit. The tailor finally had to keep the uniform and sell the gold trimmings on it to get his money back. He kept the lapel, however, as an interesting relic. When Secretary Marcy abolished the court uniform every country accepted the change without protest except Great Britain.
